Kevin Jackson, CEO

ADR Data Recovery & ADR Computer Forensics

Kevin was born in Payson, UT 1960. Growing up in a large family taught Kevin at an early age the value of hard work and good management skills. Later, in 1982, after graduating high school, Kevin became partners with a large dairy operation in Colorado. In 1989 in answer to the public concern of landfill overflow with disposable diapers, he patented, developed and successfully marketed the Bumkins baby diaper product lines. When he sold the company, it was producing 250K in monthly sales. Kevin has always wanted to succeed or fail on his own so after the sale of Bumkins Family Products, he left for NAPA valley CA with a small amount of operating cash and began a successful cleaning company. One night in 1995, Kevin lost his Quickbooks files due to a computer crash and resorted to his backups for restoration, only to discover his backups were not good. Once again need drove creative ability and Kevin saw another opportunity to begin another successful business. ADR

Data Recovery began that evening in his own home. Originally, the company was to be called American Data Recovery. However, upon domain registration, it was discovered that the web name American Data Recovery had been purchased just two days prior. Thus, ADR Data Recovery was implemented on the web. Today the company boasts over 8.2 million in annual sales, 12 labs in 36 locations nationwide. Kevin has also continued expanding his business capabilities by adding computer forensics and electronic discovery as part of ADR Data Recovery via ADR Computer Forensics. This company was involved in the initial stages of the Enron computer forensic investigation process.
